

THE WASHINGTON POST: SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1914.

Saks & Company

Nobody Knows Better Than We Do
First—What the men of Washington require in Clothes' detail.

Second—How to provide these personal exactions.

It's all right enough to declare in a general way for general features of fashion. That's the factory way—and as far as the factory can go. But to provide with definiteness is quite another matter. That's the Saks way. Only possible because we are in close-touch with your needs—and have the facilities and the designing and making talent competent to produce with accuracy and individuality.

We have made the $20 grade a feature

Quality above the usual—variety including the extreme and conservative—character equal to that in the finest grades.

We've a special line of Balmaccans at $16.75

The Karlton

The Stanhope

These two hats typify the best that can be made. The price of neither expresses the worth. But that's a Saks-made condition—we have elected to make them extraordinary values—rather than commonplace values.

Nowhere else can you buy a Karlton—or a Stanhope—and everywhere else a Hat so good is enough more—that it's worth saying.
